

AMIEIRA VILLAGE

 406  N 38° 17' 577" W7° 33'643" (dock)

This very old village was already mentioned in documents dating back to the 13th century as belonging to D. João Peres de Aboim, the master of Portel. At that time, the village was known by the name of Amieira da Moura, probably because it lay close to the road that linked Évora to Moura.

Note, among its white houses built in the traditional adobe, the religious heritage such as the S. Romão chapel and the parish church dedicated to Our Lady of Neves.

As the village was quite isolated before the Alqueva dam was built, it preserves a very rich cultural heritage in terms of songs (the traditional "cante") and traditional Alentejo poetry. Its cuisine is also quite unique, characterised by game, river fish and mountain products.
